

EDGE Initial Validation Audit

Meet Your CMS Audit Requirements and Keep Your EDGE

Benefits

- Compliance with CMS EDGE initial validation audit requirements
- Dedicated EDGE team with deep working knowledge of regulations and nationwide health plan partnership experience
- Audit and compliance team with 20+ years experience
- Certified coders to review your medical records

You have got your EDGE server implemented, so now you're ready for the Affordable Care Act (ACA) Reinsurance and Risk Adjustment programs, right? Well, not quite — you'll also need a certified audit.

Now that you're fully compliant in submitting clean claims and enrollment data, and meeting Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) technical requirements, it's time to perform the required initial validation audit of the claims on your EDGE server. According to the regulations, issuers must have certified coders review medical records for 200 random members selected by the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) and must validate the information on the claims. Health plans must provide the medical records and the claims, and are required to hire independent auditors to provide validation to CMS. So where do you start?

Data Management and Validation From a Team You Can Trust

Truven Health Analytics™ has been helping health plans save money and improve care for over 30 years. We deliver more than data. We deliver reliable answers. Since we specialize in managing complex datasets, your organization can focus on your important day-to-day operations. And you can do that with improved processes and a new ease in monitoring billing practices. Our audit and compliance team has a long history of helping commercial plans and managed care organizations like yours. We're ready to be a part of your team.

Healthcare reform is changing the landscape, and we're prepared to help you change with it. We currently offer EDGE, risk optimization, and cost-sharing reduction services to health plans and co-ops around the nation. That means you have access to our EDGE experts and their expertise when it comes to changing regulations. We are there for you to ensure you are compliant and ready to face reform.
